What helps you gain the mark?

Reminders for CLOZE (gap-fill) questions

1 Read the whole summary first

The summary is a PARAPHRASE of the text — the words around the blank are usually different.

The question tells you where to look: “Based on paragraph 3 ...”.

2 Use the words around the blank to find the word class

a / an + _____ = noun a higher _____ = comparative + noun more _____ = adjective was _____ by = past participle shown _____ = adverb or preposition phrase

3 Hunt for the matching idea in the paragraph warn us about the dangers of some current trend ↔ warn readers about today's problems quaint, outdated problems ↔ old-fashioned problems

4 Copy the EXACT word from the text — then check the form

ONE word per blank (fixed pairs like “crime rate” are accepted as one answer).

Keep the text's form: -s, -ed, -ing, -er — and check the spelling.

Then read your completed sentence again — does it make sense, and is it grammatical?

Cloze questions — 4 quick demos

(demo — taken from other paragraphs, NOT from the 6 questions you will do)

EASIER 1 • paragraph 6 (line 84)

At the start of a dystopian story, the fictional world may seem (i) _____ enough.

(i) pleasant 1 mark

EASIER 2 • paragraph 5 (lines 57–58)

Dystopian novels for young-adult readers have been around for (i) _____.

(i) decades — watch the plural -s! 1 mark

HARDER 1 • paragraph 9 (lines 141–143)

The Hunger Games could be taken as an (i) _____ of reality TV, but it is not an (ii) _____.

(i) indictment (ii) argument 2 marks

HARDER 2 • paragraph 7 (lines 110–117)

Sambell argues that the protagonist's final defeat is (i) _____ to the admonitory nature of the classic adult dystopia, and that children's authors are (ii) _____ to depict the extinction of hope.

(i) crucial (ii) reluctant 2 marks

1 word class → 2 find the paragraph → 3 copy the exact word → 4 check the form

Read the paragraph — then write your answer

1. What does “it” (line 6) refer to?

dystopia

[1] Dystopia is an imaginary place or condition in which everything is bad, and in dystopian fiction, this has traditionally been characterized by an authoritarian government or some kind of oppressive control. For young readers, dystopia isn't a future to be averted; it is a version of what's already happening in the world they inhabit.

Evidence & explanation

Read backwards — find the noun before “it”

Read the paragraph — then complete the summary

2. Based on paragraph 2, complete the text with ONE word in each blank. (5 marks)

Check the grammar — word form, plurals etc.

The novel When You Reach Me takes place in New York City (NYC) where (i) _____ grew up. In the 1970s, NYC had a higher (ii) _____, but children back then had more (iii) _____. In contrast, NYC today is (iv) _____ yet children are more (v) _____ by their parents. As a result, children don't walk the streets alone.

(i) Rebecca Stead

(ii) crime rate

(iii) freedom // autonomy // adventure

(iv) safer

(v) protected // controlled

[2] Rebecca Stead chose to set her children's novel When You Reach Me – winner of the 2010 Newbery Medal – in nineteen-seventies New York partly because that's where she grew up, but also because she wanted 'to show a world of kids with a great deal of autonomy.' Her characters, middle-class middle-school students, routinely walk around the Upper West Side by themselves, a rare freedom in today's city, despite a significant drop in New York's crime rate since Stead's footloose youth. The world of our ~~covered-over~~ teens and preteens may be safer but it's also less conducive to adventure, and therefore to adventure stories.

Evidence & explanation

Watch the form: -er (safer) • past participle (protected)

(5 marks • 91 / 78 / 74 / 59 / 45%)

Read the paragraph — then complete the synopsis

3. Based on paragraph 3, complete the book synopsis with ONE word in each blank. (6 marks)

Check the grammar — word form, plurals etc.

The Hunger Games is the (i) _____ book in a trilogy of novels written by Suzanne Collins. The story takes place some time in the (ii) _____. Two children from (iii) _____ district are forced to compete in the Hunger Games. The contest is held in an (iv) _____ and shown (v) _____. The sole survivor (vi) _____.

(i) first

(ii) future

(iii) each

(iv) outdoor arena

(v) on television // TV

(vi) wins // lives

25 [3] Perhaps that's why so many of them are reading The Hunger Games, a trilogy of novels by Suzanne Collins, which depicts a futuristic North America broken up into twelve districts. Every year, two children from each district are forced to fight to death in a 30 televised contest called the Hunger Games, which are held in a huge outdoor arena. The 35 winner of the contest is the last child left alive. The fervently awaited third installment in the trilogy, Mockingjay, will be published by Scholastic in August, and there are currently in print more than 2.3 million copies of the previous two books, The Hunger Games and Catching Fire.

Evidence & explanation

The third book is Mockingjay — so this one is ...?

4. What does the simile “like a wicked strain of the flu” (lines 68–69) suggest about the book The White Mountains?

the interest in dystopian novels for young-adult readers spread very quickly // the book was infectious // it was popular / a big hit (among teens, among her classmates)

65 their behavior. The White Mountains, in which alien overlords install mind-control caps on the heads of all those over the age of thirteen, tore through my own sixth-grade classroom like a wicked strain of the flu. Depending on the

5. In paragraph 7, find a word which means “a major disaster”.

catastrophe // apocalypse

105 [7] The youth-centered versions of dystopia part company with their adult predecessors in some important respects. For one thing, the grownup ones are grimmer. The British academic Kay Sambell argues that ‘the 110 protagonist’s final defeat and failure is absolutely crucial to the admonitory nature of the classic adult dystopia.’ The adult dystopia extrapolates from the present to show readers how terrible things will become if our 115 deplorable behavior continues unchecked.
Because authors of children’s fiction are ‘reluctant to depict the extinction of hope within their stories,’ Sambell writes, they equivocate when it comes to delivering a moral.
120 Yes, our errors and delusions may lead to catastrophe but if – as usually happens in dystopian novels for children – a new, better way of life can be assembled from the ruins, would the apocalypse really be such a bad 125 thing?

Evidence & explanation

Look for a NOUN — and do not write “disaster”
(1 mark • 69%)

Read the paragraph — then write your answer

6. What does “this” (line 139) refer to?

children not having control in the world // (children)
don't run the world

140 [9] Children, however, don't run the world, and teenagers, especially, feel the sting of this. Dystopian fiction may be the only genre written for children that's routinely less didactic than its adult counterpart. The Hunger Games could be taken as an indictment of reality TV, but it is not an argument. It operates like a fable or a myth, a story in 145 which outlandish and extravagant figures and events serve as conduits for universal experiences.
